Ashley has been with Markosky for over 3 years. She has extensive experience as an Environmental Scientist. Her experience includes field reconnaissance and data collection with a focus on environmental aspects of federal, state, and local permit applications. She has conducted and supervised wetland delineations, Phase I Environmental Assessments, stream classification investigations, water well specific capacity tests, and environmental compliance sample collection. Ashley performs environmental assessments in the field along with preparing various environmental related reports and permits. In her new role, Ashley will be taking the responsibility of managing the Environmental Sciences Department. She will guide the staff within the department to coordinate projects and be sure that all goals and objectives are met.
